OLD KICKAPOOGUN.

AN ANCIENT CANNON THAT HAS A REMARKABLE RECORD.

It played an important part in the struggle over slavery in Kansas—was a hero of the Civil War—has been the cause of much trouble and has been the cause of much trouble and has been the cause of much trouble.

There was recently shipped from Chicago to the Kansas State Historical Society one of the most valuable relics of the border ruffian warfare. It is the old Kickapoo cannon which did service at Old Kickapoo, Lawrence and other points along the Missouri border during Kansas' early struggle for free state government. This old gun formed the base of contention in many a hard fought contest between proslavery and antislavery forces, and a large number of the old citizens of Kansas remember the stirring events clustering about the history of this remarkable implement of warfare.

Of late years the whereabouts of the old gun has been a matter of conjecture, and by many it was thought to have been lost, but it is due to the efforts of Colonel H. Miles Moore and Captain J. C. Walkinshaw of Leavenworth that Old Kickapoo has been resurrected. The relic is in the room of the State Historical Society in this city.

The gun is a six-pound smooth-bore, cast-iron cannon, first cast at the United States Arsenal at Leavenworth, Mo., and from there taken to Lawrence, Kan., where it was used in the battle of Kickapoo, after it was indicted by the proslavery grand jury at Leavenworth, and ordered to be taken as a nuisance by Judge Cook, who had the writ directed to Sheriff Jones, who executed the writ, and took the cannon to Lawrence, where it was used in the battle of Kickapoo.

The bombardment which followed was one of the memorable conflicts of border ruffian days. The cannon was placed on Massachusetts street, Lawrence, opposite, and trained on the hotel owned by General David Atchison, then a United States senator from Missouri. The first shot went over the roof of the hotel. The second went through a second story window, and the third and fourth shots struck the stone walls, scarcely making an impression on them. Jones, seeing that he was not likely to secure the insurance that way, applied the torch and destroyed the building. The cannon then went to the residence of a second story window, and the third and fourth shots struck the stone walls, scarcely making an impression on them.

Colonel H. Miles Moore first suggested the plan to go to Kickapoo and capture the gun. He conceived the idea of the more daring of them, under the leadership of Captain J. C. Moore, went with Sheriff Jones and a posse of men to Kickapoo. The cannon was recovered by a writ in the hands of the sheriff or other proslavery officers of the county or territory, the gun was taken to Lawrence, where it was used in the battle of Kickapoo.

Finally the cannon was taken to Lawrence, where it was used in the battle of Kickapoo. The cannon was recovered by a writ in the hands of the sheriff or other proslavery officers of the county or territory, the gun was taken to Lawrence, where it was used in the battle of Kickapoo.

SPORT IN THE VELDT.

A TALE OF GUNNING THAT WILL WARM A HUNTER'S BLOOD.

Game Birds That Are Game Among Their Prey—Wagon Life in a Wild Country—Innocent of Fumes and Poisons—No Heavy Carriage to Embarrass the Hunter.

Wagon life in the South African interior has of course its drawbacks, yet the climate, where for about seven months absolutely settled weather may be relied upon, its pleasures outnumber those to be had in any other country. The game is abundant, and the hunting is of a different order from that of the north, where the hunter is often obliged to go to great lengths to secure a single bird.

Of late years the whereabouts of the old gun has been a matter of conjecture, and by many it was thought to have been lost, but it is due to the efforts of Colonel H. Miles Moore and Captain J. C. Walkinshaw of Leavenworth that Old Kickapoo has been resurrected. The relic is in the room of the State Historical Society in this city.

ALBERT EDWARD'S EXPENSIVE JOKE.

How He Squandered the Crookery and Follies of an Elderly Countryman.

Albert Edward, prince of Wales, is perhaps the most popular man in England. This popularity is due to his love of sports and all manly pursuits, which are particularly commendable in the eyes of the average Briton. As a youth his audacity and appreciation of a joke, either as a perpetrator or victim, were well known to his friends.

One of his early escapades resulted in his majesty the queen footing a bill for broken crockery and wrecked furniture, which he paid for out of his pocket. The prince was then a young man, and his friends were not at all surprised at his conduct. He was then a young man, and his friends were not at all surprised at his conduct.

Albert Edward did as commanded and walked back and forth several times across the floor from one end of the room to the other, walking briskly at the request of the crockery dealer. The prince was then a young man, and his friends were not at all surprised at his conduct.

NERVES OF SURGEONS.

After Stage Fright When Facing a Difficult Operation.

Two Years in Which It Affected Them—A Young Surgeon's First Operation, Through a Strange and Unusual Nervous Operating on a Friend.

"There is such a thing as stage fright among surgeons," a successful New York surgeon was asked. Though the term stage fright with reference to surgery was new to him, he was not at all surprised at the statement. He was then a young man, and his friends were not at all surprised at his conduct.
